

Mohamed Salah

Short Bio/CV

- I graduated from the faculty of medicine, Cairo university 1996
- I obtained my master degree from Cairo University in internal medicine and nephrology 2001
- I obtained my M.D. degree in internal medicine and nephrology from Al Azhar university in Cairo 2006
- Currently I am:
  - Professor of internal medicine and nephrology. Since 2018
  - Secretary General of the ESNT. Since 2021
  - Dean of the National Institute of Urology and nephrology. Since 2021
  - Scientific board member of nephrology fellowship. Since 2020
  - Board member of the national committee of the non communicable disease. Since 2019
  - Nephrology moderator of the higher scientific committee for combating COVID-19 in the Egyptian Ministry of health. Since 2020
  - Vice chairman of the COVID-19 committee of the AFRAN where I have the honor to co author the AFRAN guidelines for COVID19 nephrology patients. Since 2020

---

Candidate's Statement

Statement on what i wish to accomplish as an ISN Regional Board leader and Councillor:

- intensify the cooperation between different nephrology societies in Africa and encourage the scientific events between different countries.
- Help junior African nephrologists to get a reasonable training and education through zoom meetings, physical attendance to major scientific meetings in/out the continent and by sending them to get training as visiting residents in the renowned centres in/out the continent.
- Establishing and implementing guidelines with the participation of the different African societies and nephrology figures to which will be consistent with the international guidelines and the specific nature of the African communities regarding the resources, patient background and some endemic diseases that put a great burden on the African population.
- Becoming a direct link between the ISN and the different societies in the continent emphasising on the pivotal role of the ISN as the nephrology benchmark for all societies in the world